REPORT

OF THE

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

FOR 1870-71.

SCHOOL REPORT.

At the Town Meeting in March, of this year, it will be remembered that there was much discussion upon the subject of the schools, and much complaint of the action of the previous Committee. As a first step to improvement, the number of the Committee was increased from three to six, and the wisdom of this course became immediately apparent. That fifteen schools, since increased to seventeen, separated, many of them, by intervals of miles, and not directly connected by railway, should have been efficiently superintended by three men, who are also engaged in other business, was an expectation wholly unreasonable. Indeed, the day is probably not far distant when it will be found expedient for the town to appoint a Superintendent of Schools, who shall devote his time to the business, the functions of the Committee being then purely advisory.

In commenting upon the schools, therefore, it will be observed that the present Committee have no intention of reflecting upon their predecessors, or of complaining of the actual state of things. Their aim has been, in searching for the weak points, to lay a foundation for that progress, which, being always desirable, becomes absolutely necessary to conform to the rapid growth and educational requirements of the town.

During the present year four new school-houses have been completed and opened for use. That at Wellesley (which, in honor of a munificent donation it was voted, in Committee, to call the "Hunnewell" School) and that of the Plain are first-class buildings, calculated to accommodate the three kinds of Primary, Grammar, and High Schools. The buildings at Highlandville and the Upper Falls are somewhat smaller, and include only two schools each, but seem to be well adapted for their purpose. The question of heating became an important one, and the general desire was for furnaces. But as these could not be covered by the appropriations for building, the Committee hesitated to expend so large a sum as would be necessary to supply all the buildings. Besides, the relative merits of the different furnaces were so uncertain, that it might be a serious mistake to adopt one kind for the whole. It was decided, therefore, after much consideration, to supply the two largest buildings (at Wellesley and the Plain), the former with the furnace of Levi Chubbuck & Son, and the latter with that of Gardner Chilson & Co., while the other buildings should be temporarily fitted with stoves, either on hand or hired for the purpose; and it remains for the town to decide whether they will appropriate the additional sum necessary for the two other furnaces, and, with the light of experience, which of the two furnaces above-named or what other they will adopt.

At the time when the appropriations for school buildings were made, an amount equal to that given to the other districts was awarded to the village of Grantville. At Wellesley and the Plain, however, this sum was largely increased by private subscription, and buildings secured of a much higher class than could otherwise have been obtained. Such additional means have as yet not been furnished in Grantville, and the question has still farther been kept open by difference of opinion as to the proper location of the new building. It is to be feared, however, that the desire to secure the appropriation already made may lead to the commencement of an inadequate building upon a site too hastily determined upon. It is suggested for consideration, therefore, whether it would not be for the interest of the town, as well as of the special district, to allow the sum assigned to Grantville to bear a certain rate of interest until its employment can be intelligently decided upon.

It has been the custom, heretofore, that the West High School should alternate yearly between Grantville and Wellesley, rooms being hired and the furniture moved back and forth; but, with the provision of so good a building at Wellesley, it seemed undesirable to continue this course, while yet the remote situation was very inconvenient to the scholars from Grantville, who constitute about three-fourths of those attending the school. Under these circumstances the Committee voted to furnish railroad tickets, for the winter term, to scholars from Grantville.

In taking a general review of the schools, the defect which forms the greatest obstacle to progress appears to be that of discipline, not as to individuals, but as to the whole, and not so much in deportment as intellectually. In a school as in an army this is fatal to efficiency. The requirements of the school, while they should be kept moderate and within the capacity of the scholars, should be looked upon as an inexorable necessity. If a scholar is allowed to omit lessons, either singly or consecutively, he soon falls behind his class and loses interest in a study. And if, as appears to have been largely the practice, a scholar advances from one class to another simply by lapse of time, and not through acquirement, thoroughness of education becomes almost an impossibility. The existence of this defect is mainly attributable to the fact, which will appear from a cursory examination of the registers, of the great irregularity of attendance. Absences from school are doubtless to some extent unavoidable. Distance will often, in bad weather, interfere with attendance. Many of the scholars are the children of poor parents, who in seed-time and harvest require their services. But probably few are so poor as not to be able, if they appreciated the necessity, to make much greater sacrifices in this respect than they now do. Many children are also kept at home by their parents on slight pretexts, for the convenience of the latter, and the general laxity in this respect encourages truancy, and indulgence on the part of the parents towards the children. The attempt has been made to enforce the rule, that after six half days' absence the children should be sent to the local Committee before again attending school. But as a continued exclusion from school, besides being a visitation in many cases of the sins of the parents upon the children, is in reality beyond the powers of the Committee, the members have usually, after an admonition, given them an order for re admission.

The omission of lessons through absence, and the advancement of classes by mere lapse of time, instead of through individual attainment, are incompatible with proper grading of the schools. In almost every one the Committee have found the same want of accurately divided classes, — some scholars being in two classes in different studies, and others being manifestly incompetent to keep up with the one to which they nominally belong. With this absence of reward for industry and drawback for negligence, the stimulus to exertion is very limited, and the good scholars are held back to drag along the poor ones. The remedy seems to lie in a system of stringent and frequent examinations. These should be held, not only for the passage from one school to another, but also from one class to another, and not only at the end of the term or year, but at short intervals, so that every scholar might advance, maintain, or lose his grade, in close accordance with the degree of his exertion and the regularity of his attendance. If these examinations were conducted by means of written questions, and with an accurate marking by percentage, there would be no room for the charge of favoritism, or for giving offence, which is the reason now assigned by the teachers for not degrading any backward or negligent scholar. If conducted by the teacher and the local Committee, they would not create such a claim upon the time of the members of the Committee as would otherwise constitute an insuperable barrier to their introduction.

PRIMARY SCHOOLS.

These are very full in numbers, and are much the best in character, because, as learning is not so important with very young children, the evil effects of absence and want of stimulus are not so apparent, though even here the lack of proper grading is already felt.

In the North School, kept by Miss Emily Crafts, although the appearance of the school was very good, there were some complaints of capriciousness of discipline, as well as severity beyond what was suited to such young children. Desiring to remedy this, and also appreciating the valuable services of Miss Crafts, the Committee offered her the charge of a Grammar School, with increased salary. Upon her declining this, the Committee felt justified in transferring the North Primary School to Miss McCutcheon, who now has it in charge.

At the Wellesley School, the Committee have to regret the loss of Miss Cadian, under whose control it was in excellent condition. It has been continued under Miss Townsend, with good results, though the numbers, at one time amounting to nearly sixty, have been an obstacle to entire success. Should they continue to increase, unless relief is afforded by a considerable transfer to the Grammar School, it may be found necessary to provide an assistant.

In view of her long experience, it may not be invidious to mention the school of Miss Hoffses, at the Centre, as a model, especially as regards the management of young children. The school of Miss Tenney at the Plain is also in excellent condition. In the East District, the Committee found at the commencement of the year seventy-five scholars crowded into one small room, and under a single teacher. The new school-house was, however, already near completion, and the defect was remedied by division into two schools. The Primary Department, under Miss Bowen, has since made progress which leads us to regret that she has been forced from ill health to resign her position.

MIXED SCHOOLS.

There are now but two of these, that at the South Mills, and the North-west; that at Grantville being now in effect a Primary School. That at the North-west deserves mention for good management and progress in instruction under Miss Kingsbury.

GRAMMAR SCHOOLS.

As we advance a stage in education, to a period when affectionate care and management decline in importance compared with the preparation for the struggle of life, the defects alluded to become more painfully apparent. At the North School, under Miss Ellen Crafts, the progress is as great as seems possible under these obstacles. At the Hunnewell School, though the order and deportment were good, the proficiency in studies has not been satisfactory. For the present term the school is under control of Mr. William Marsh, a graduate of the University of Vermont, and it is hoped that some method may be found of securing better scholastic results. At the Plain School, also, the results do not seem to accord with the excellent material in the way of scholars. It has been remarked that the East School was divided into two portions. The upper might be called, perhaps, an Intermediate rather than a Grammar School; but, however this may be, the Committee wish to bear testimony to the results which the unwearied exertion and the patient and refined influence of Miss Guptill have produced from, perhaps, somewhat difficult material. If the school were brought into proper grading, and urged by the stimulus of frequent examinations, it would soon present an appearance of which the town need not be ashamed.

HIGH SCHOOLS.

It seems advisable to state the truth exactly as it appears. The way to overcome a difficulty is to probe it to the bottom. The following remarks are written mostly from observation of the West High School, but it is believed that they are not wholly inapplicable to the East High. There has appeared among the scholars a tone of disrespect in speaking of the school, a sort of disbelief that there was anything to be gained by going there. It has happened, also, in several cases, that parents, finding that their children were making no progress, have withdrawn them, and, at considerable expense both for railway fares and tuition, have sent them to out-of-town schools; a circumstance, which, in view of the expense at which the High School is provided by the town, is highly unsatisfactory. At the commencement of the year the Committee found the school in a very lax state of discipline, in fact resembling a social reunion rather than a school. By the efforts of the new teacher, a considerable reform has been effected, and the improved deportment has been commented upon by several visitors. The regularity of attendance has also been gratifying; the number of absences and tardinesses being comparatively very small. But the fact remains that the degree of literary attainment is also very small, and anything but thorough. Upon careful consideration, and comparison with the schools in other places, the Committee are led to the belief that the fault is not so much with either teacher or scholars as with the system. If scholars of moderate proficiency in arithmetic, spelling, grammar, and geography are sent to the High School simply because they have passed a certain number of years in a Grammar School, and to make room for those crowding up from the Primary Schools; if these pupils are put upon Latin, algebra, mental and physical science, etc.; and if besides, after passing one year in such studies, they are advanced in a body to the next without test of individual acquirement, — it must result that their recitations become mechanical, and their scholarship superficial.

The first reform to be effected seems to be the reduction of the standard of studies to the capacity of the scholars who
